SAD CASE OF THOSE WHO SUPPORT WAR

Obviously I have Ukraine foremost in my mind as I write this. Back in Candour #880, May - June, 2022, pg 2. column 2, I printed a couple of short pieces. One by myself. They were misinterpreted by a very few people in the 'movement', but not a single paying Candour subscriber to my knowledge, as being pro-Russian.

They were not but they were certainly anti-Zelensky and the rest of the rotten, corrupt regime in Ukraine and against any British support for war or sanctions against Russia.

The Ukrainian comedian (only his backers are laughing now) President Volodymyr Zelensky is a "schnorrer"* and it will be interesting to see how long before his "shtick"*** wears off completely. It is certainly wearing thin...

**Schnorrer.* A Yiddish term meaning "beggar" or "sponger". The English language usage of the word denotes a sly chiseler who will get money out of his acquaintances any way he can, often through an air of entitlement. A schnorrer is distinguished from an ordinary beggar by dint of his boundless chutzpah. Like "moocher", "schnorrer" does not apply to direct begging or destitution, but rather a habit of getting things (food, tools, weapons) by politely or insistently borrowing them with no intention of return.

\*Shtick.* Yiddish. When referring to an actor or performer of some sort, shtick is a particular gimmick, theme or routine associated with that person. With Zelensky think green clothing for example.

Liberal 'Cancel' Action Backfires in Spectacular Style!

US Country and Western singer Jason Aldean released a song back in May 2023 (see lyrics below). The Official video was only latched onto by liberal 'whites' in July with claims that the video was an encouragement to lynching and was anti-BLM. Check out the black 'bloggers' who wonder why the racial fuss. Most of them KNOW that they are being used as shields by the Liberal elite in their anti-white war and have huge contempt for the violent, corrupt and exploitative Black Lives Matter and Antifa who claim to fight on their behalf.

Try That In a Small Town By Jason Aldean

Official video on

Sucker punch somebody on a sidewalk
Carjack an old lady at a red light
Pull a gun on the owner of a liquor store
Ya think it's cool, well, act a fool if ya like

Cuss out a cop, spit in his face
Stomp on the flag and light it up
Yeah, ya think you're tough

Well, try that in a small town
See how far ya make it down the road
Around here, we take care of our own
You cross that line, it won't take long
For you to find out, I recommend you don't
Try that in a small town

Got a gun that my granddad gave me
They say one day they're gonna round up
Well, that shit might fly in the city, good luck

Try that in a small town
See how far ya make it down the road
Around here, we take care of our own
You cross that line, it won't take long
For you to find out, I recommend you don't
Try that in a small town

Full of good ol' boys, raised up right
If you're looking for a fight
Try that in a small town
Try that in a small town

Try that in a small town
See how far ya make it down the road
Around here, we take care of our own
You cross that line, it won't take long

War in Ukraine

By Bill Baillie

Public opinion in the UK is influenced by the mass media. They see the war in Ukraine as an unprovoked Russian invasion; but this is far from the truth. There are two sides to every story but we are only getting the NATO-approved narrative. The war is actually the result of a coup organised by the CIA in 2014 that deposed the elected president and installed the current, immensely corrupt, regime.

Volodymyr Zelensky is hailed in the West as a hero. In fact, he is a dictator who has locked up the opposition and made war on his Russian-speaking population. The Pandora Papers leaked to the International Consortium of Investigative Journalists (icij.com) reveals that he has $1.4 billion in overseas accounts. This was not reported on a pro-Putin website but in The Guardian of October 2021. Now 21-year-old US airman Jack Teixeira has posted classified Pentagon documents showing that Ukraine is losing the war with a seven to one kill ratio in favour of Russia.

This war has devastated Ukraine and damaged the economies of many countries. Sanctions were supposed to hurt Russia but they have done more harm to us. Energy prices have doubled in Europe but self-sufficient Russia has switched her exports to China and India. It's not easy to wage economic war on the largest country in the world when it has almost unlimited natural resources.

Turkey tried to bring about peace talks at the start of the war but this was sabotaged by Boris Johnson who flew to Kiev with promises of arms and money. Now, China has tried to organise a ceasefire but this has been rejected by America. The Western nations are fuelling the fire by sending arms and money to Zelensky, but despite his vainglorious rhetoric, the war will eventually be settled around the conference table.

And when this unnecessary war is over the future of NATO must be considered. NATO was set up after WW2 to counter the Soviet Union. Europe was in ruins and the Red Army was camped in Berlin and Vienna. Britain, together with France, Germany and Italy relied on America for protection and even sustenance. The Marshall Plan saved us from starvation and NATO provided a defensive shield. That was over 70 years ago; today things are completely different. When the Soviet Union was disbanded in December 1991 the West should have responded by disbanding NATO; instead we expanded it into eastern Europe and used it to wage war in the Balkans.

America's hatred of Russia is driven by the Military-Industrial Complex and Cold War propaganda. The threat of Communism no longer exists; Russia is an Orthodox Christian nation with an elected government, and China is capitalist through and through. The Chinese cling to the language of the past as do the British, they have the Chinese Communist Party and we have the Order of the British Empire, and Imperial College.

There's no reason for the West to be hostile to China or Russia. If Donald Trump is re-elected in November 2024 he has promised to restore common sense to international affairs. We must pray that he is successful.

Daily Mail's Dam Lies

THE Geneva Convention was designed to prevent the horrors of war being inflicted on civilians.

The destruction of the Nova Kakhovka dam has flooded villages and towns, leading to the displacement of thousands of Ukrainian citizens. A vast area of agricultural land has been polluted, rendering it useless for years to come.

The Convention is not worth the paper it was written on because despots don't care about the rules of war. It needs to be renegotiated or tossed into the bin.

ASHLEY SMITH, March, Cambs.

JUST how low can the cruel, corrupt Kremlin stoop?

Of course Russia denies bombing the dam, just like it denied bombing homes and hospitals. Putin has no regard for human life, even that of his own soldiers.

W.R. McCROSSAN, Co. Antrim.

WHEN it comes to Putin and the flood disaster, there are lies, dam lies and ballistics.

DAVID PEARCE,
Wilmslow, Cheshire.

Qui Bono?

With every new 'conflict' the level of anti - 'enemy' propaganda descends to new lows. As always the vile Daily Mail leads the charge of the Colonel Blimps and non-thinkers.

Note how quiet the claims have become that the Russians blew up their own Gazprom-owned Nord Stream pipeline at the end of 2022. The latest fake claim is that Russia destroyed the Kakhovka dam in Southern Ukraine. Ashley Smith has obviously never heard of WWII and the Dambusters raid in 1943 that destroyed THREE Ruhr valley dams and caused a hell of a lot more damage and loss of life.

I should like to think that the last from David Pearce was intentional irony that slipped past a 12-year-old sub-editor. "Lies, damned lies and statistics." Mark Twain.

NetZero: The Great Green Shakedown

By H. M.

NetZero has now come home, to me and probably if not already, to you, dear reader. My local council, Lambeth, motto 'spectemur agendo'* is coming up with new ways to tax its residents. Car owners are first in the line of fire. It has imposed parking fees calibrated to vehicle emissions, rather than engine size, meaning a considerable price hike. Under their 'Kerbside Strategy' access to a kerb will become an increasingly pricey and scarce privilege. There is considerable opposition to this, which becomes clear when reading the comments to the consultation which I can only imagine has been offered for the sake of appearances. Also evident is the widespread scepticism over the real motivation behind it: 'financially driven', 'too expensive'. The stock response (they are the listening council, after all), is that it '.... has declared a climate emergency'. Oh, that's all right then.

Recently becoming a car owner and human nature being what it is this new imposition has spurred me to find out what this NetZero business is all about.

NetZero or carbon neutrality means the amount of human induced greenhouse gas emissions released into the atmosphere equal to the amount that can be removed from it. Unless strictly controlled, the story goes, we will have runaway global warming with all its concomitant problems: extreme weather events, flooded cities, droughts, species extinction, food supply disruption, wildfires and so forth. Environmentalism is the new religion which can save us if we adhere to its tenets, and its puritans are clearly on a mission, making them useful tools to the powers that be. But their beliefs are based on a fallacy that man is the primary mover in climate change, and carbon dioxide emissions the most significant gas affecting the climate. There are plenty of anomalies of warm weather that don't correlate with increased CO2 emission. During the post war economic boom period temperatures actually fell, only increasing in 1975 during an industrial downturn, and satellite measurements have detected no significant increase in the last 25 years. Far and away the most important gas effecting climate is water vapour, as anyone who has spent the night in the desert could tell you. CO2 is an important but relatively minor gas, an increase being positively good for humans and plants. Satellite readings did show an increase in temperature from 1979-1989, with CO2 levels increasing but then temperatures began to cool. That didn't fit the narrative, so the labelling had to change, and the predictions of hired experts became projections and global warning became climate change which in turn became crisis, and since 2019 it's been an emergency.

So what are the origins and motives behind this? Clearly, by fabricating a global emergency only a globally co-ordinated response can save us. This legitimises emergency powers to an over arching bureaucracy which compels us willy nilly to make sacrifices for the greater good. It would be too obvious here to mention the plandemic. A willing compliant population is so much easier to control. And if your intention is to weaken industrialised nations what better way than to decimate their access to reliable energy supplied by fossil fuels which when burned emit CO2, the demonized global heating gas. By the way, how much fossil fuel does it take to build a wind farm?

This over arching supra-national bureaucracy called the United Nations first adopted its 'Environmental Programme' following The Human Environment Conference of 1972 held in Stockholm, theme 'Only One Earth'. Throughout the 1970's various worthy seeming Conventions, Programmes, Action Plans and Protocols ensue culminating in the much vaunted Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Earth Summit Declaration of 1992. A 13-year-old speaker is co-opted to pull heartstrings**. The resultant Agenda 21 introduces the idea of local, national and globally co-ordinated objectives controlling all aspects of human life.

Back to the science thread, the United Nations Environment Programme and the World Meteorological Organisation establish the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, (IPCC), in 1988; Margaret Thatcher being instrumental in its formation. The scientists' remit was conveniently narrowed to only look at climate change caused directly or indirectly by humans, and so ignoring all else. The resultant biased scientific report went some way into supplying the answers sought. This research was then morphed into a 'Synthesis Report Summary for Policymakers' put together by others which distorted things even further. By the time it reached the public it became simple misinformation. The IPCC does intermittent updated reports and is now on its 6th edition. And it's no secret research scientists are funded to bolster the conclusions of the narrative as told to the public.

Unfortunately for the vast majority of British residents, the UK government thought fit/were coerced to trail blaze ahead of other nations, and burden us with the legally binding Climate Change Act of 2008. This consolidated a commitment to reduce the UK's greenhouse gas emissions by 80% below 1990 levels by 2050. Not going far enough, pressure from Friends of the Earth, remember 'The Big Ask?' and the Committee on Climate Change advisory body in 2019 got this amended to Net Zero in 2019. This in practice means setting carbon targets and budgeting carbon emissions. The framework is set out in the government's Ten Point Plan for a Green Industrial Revolution 2020.

There is a groundswell of opinion opposed to NetZero. Peter Ford, a recent British Ambassador to Bahrain and Syria in a recent talk*** made a call for 'Zexit'. The demand for a referendum proposing a withdrawal from the IPCC, and the annulment of the Climate Change Act; effecting a cancellation of commitment. But would the Tories dare? Unlikely. Perhaps they realise it would backfire like Brexit. Tory compromises on NetZero are a vote winner; their potential voters are tired of green propaganda. While Starmer promises Scottish voters they can have their cake and eat it with oil, gas and wind farms peppering the North Sea. Maybe it's time for electoral reform, but that's a subject for another day.

*London Borough of Lambeth choose to interpret this as "Let us be regarded according to our conduct".

**This was 13-year-old Canadian girl Severn Cullis-Suzuki. The mixed race poster child would be followed years later by the incredibly weird and thoroughly unpleasant Greta Thunberg of Sweden who addressed the 2018 UN Climate Change Conference in Katowice, Poland. Remember this led to world-wide school student strikes that teachers and authorities either supported or turned a blind eye to.

Edited additional information received by H. M. from Peter Ford via email communication.

"Hello Peter,

You said in your talk at the meeting (Thursday, June 1st, 2023) that the IPCC was instigated by Margaret Thatcher, are you saying therefore that she was the key player? Checking the dates I see that the miners strike ended in 1985, the IPCC inaugurated in 1988 and her premiership ending in 1990, so would I be right in thinking she (Thatcher) pursued that as a sort of final nail in the coffin of the coal industry? Thatcher was a scientist so she must have found fault with the process proving the hypothesis of man made climate change. H. M."

Reply:

"It's noteworthy that by 2003 Thatcher the chemist was decrying the whole thing as a scam. Her use of it had been tactical, though I suppose she may have suspended critical judgement for a while because it was so convenient to do so in her war on coal.

All the Best,
Peter Ford.

British Prime Minister's Grandfather was anti-British Mau Mau Terrorist Backer

Recently several sources have published revelations about the current British Prime Minister Rishi Sunak's paternal grandfather, Ramdas Sunak, who had moved from the Punjab to Nairobi as a young man.

Headlines include: Hindustan Times "Rishi Sunak's Grandfather aided 1950's Kenyan Revolt against Britishers", or at MailOnline "Rishi Sunak's grandfather 'trained Mau Mau militants who fought the British in Kenya': PM's late relative... taught the rebels guerilla techniques and was part of a Hindu supremacist group - despite being on the UK's colonial payroll..."

Amazingly what seems to be causing Rishi Sunak grief about this shocking story is not the killing of white British settlers, soldiers, administrators or the murder and maiming of tens of thousands of loyal Africans in Kenya but his grandfather's involvement with the banned Indian outfit Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS). Hindu extremists involved in the 1948 assassination of Mahatma Gandhi.

This causes Rishi huge embarrassment with the millions of non-Hindu Indians and Pakistani's in the UK. In particular those Muslims who back the vile Conservative party.

These revelations come as the Tory administration has paid some £20 million compensation (and a lot more to lawyers) to 5,000 elderly Kenyans (very probably Mau Mau) who claimed they had suffered abuse at the hands of the British during the uprising which lasted from 1952 to 1960.

Not only was Ramdas on the British payroll at the time of his terrorist activities two of his sons were at British universities!

Once the Kenyans had their independence in 1963 life for the many Indians who had come to totally dominate business in the country, and were regarded as parasites, would become extremely unpleasant. 'Racism!'. In 1971 Ramdas moved countries again. To Britain, obviously, where he would become a pillar of his extremist Hindu community in Southampton and die in 1980 the year that our future Prime Minister was born.

Britain's National Front: The Triumph & The Legacy

The real progenitor of British Racial-Nationalism An Encomium.

A personal view!

By Stephen Smith

Above: The vanguard of the National Front parade in Leicester to celebrate St. George's Day in 1979. Note the absence of St. George flags. The powerful and simple St. George Cross only gained greatly in popularity in the early to mid 1980's when nationalist minded England football supporters pushed it once more to the fore.

Provenance. We all have it; Family, neighbourhood, town, region, nation – Race. Where we come from. Many of us in the Nationalist movement possess a political provenance; The National Front, Britain's foremost Nationalist organisation throughout the 1970s and until the mid-1980s. Possibly the best so far. Once revered by other White Nationalists in the Western World especially the Anglophone world. Thousands of us belonged to it, millions heard its message. Many of us (dead or alive) spent years campaigning for 'the Front'. Many of us had our political origins (and unique ideological education!) in this party. Our origins. Our provenance.

Important to stress that unlike civic 'nationalists' or reactionaries our core beliefs are rooted in the iron reality of Mother Nature and her eternal laws.

We naturally take the view that Nature, Heredity, Genetics are the determinant factors that create unique, essentially unalterable characteristics in humanity. What we are. Nurture, economics, social environment are only secondary, modifying factors. Our peculiar personalities are at least 65-70% biologically fixed. Sociobiology as we used to say! Therefore, our ideology, especially regarding race stems from this core principle of accepting men, women... nations for what they are, really are and instead of trying to change our respective attributes (an obsession of the ideological perversity of liberalism and cultural Marxism) we believe in working with nature instead of against it!

Universal human equality is a bizarre fantasy born of mental illness and a sense of inferiority.

Real Racial-Nationalists instinctively understand this.

A Different Type of Politics

Founded as a grand coalition of the 'Right' in February 1967 it was dissolved ('officially') in March 1990. Any group that has used the name since then will have an increasingly tenuous link with the old National Front. The focus here is on the original article with particular emphasis on the halcyon days of the 1970's. Also, in this short article I will not delve into the murky destructive world of the various factions (and individuals) that appeared in the party on a regular basis and ultimately destroyed it. The emphasis here is on the positive contribution of the NF to the Nationalist movement. The National Front at times frightened, terrified, and haunted Britain's liberal political establishment particularly in the late 1970s. It won no seats when it clearly had the ability to certainly win council seats, though it came awfully close on numerous occasions. Nevertheless, it had the potential to become a serious mass movement for British Nationalism. A mass movement that would have begun the revival and resurgence of the British nation based on authentic Racial-Nationalism!

Many mainstream political commentators c. 1977 considered it to be England's fourth party. A remarkable achievement considering the humble origins ten years prior.

The Early Years 1967-74

This period saw quiet steady progress. No significant impact, yet. Election results were (for a minor party) modest, at times mediocre. Nonetheless, as a coalition of the Nationalist 'Right' it had held together relatively well.

The NF eventually picked up political steam in the latter part of 1972. The issue that sparked interest in the party, membership expansion and impressive votes was the matter of the Ugandan Asians in the summer of 1972. Uganda's military dictator Idi Amin, decided to 'Africanise' his country and made the decision to forcibly remove all Ugandan Asians whose origins were in India. They were British passport holders. Amin only gave them a limited time to leave the country. An estimated 28,000 ended up in Britain as refugees but with the obvious link to the British Empire and its colonies. Bearing in mind that they were generally peaceful and industrious, and the numbers were miniscule compared to the mass immigration of today it was amazing how the public responded and how the National Front prospered. However, the British people had been increasingly opposed to coloured immigration since the late 1950s. Enoch Powell's famous speech of 1968 accentuated this strident opposition.

Added to this was the usual Establishment lies (in this instance through the Tory Party). Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative Party had promised in their 1970 General Election Manifesto that... "we will oversee the end of large-scale immigration...". Obviously, this was in response to Powell's famous speech. And yet only two years into his Premiership Heath let in the Ugandan Asians who could have gone to India anyway, that country's policy then was to encourage the return of diaspora Indians.

Throughout the late summer of 1972 the NF engaged in a number of publicity seeking activities emphasising this latest betrayal on the crucial issue of immigration. The party's campaign on this issue brought valuable political dividends. The party's name slowly began to make an imprint on the consciousness of the British people. Election results not only at local level but also at parliamentary by-elections could indicate a new party of serious political potential!

The first parliamentary by-election where the National Front polled exceptionally well was in Uxbridge, west London in December 1972. Despite the party having competition from three other 'Right of Centre' candidates who collectively polled 1,765 votes, the NF recorded 2,920 votes (8.71%). A remarkable result. An even better result (again at parliamentary level) was achieved six months later in May 1973 in West Bromwich, West Midlands. The candidate was the party's National Activities Organiser, Martin Webster. Similar to the Uxbridge campaign but with greater intensity, large numbers of activists were poured into the constituency. Intense canvassing reinforced by various excellent public activities.

For the first time in the party's history an election deposit was saved. The threshold for saving deposits then being 12.5%. It was a fantastic result for a small party: 4,789 votes (16.02%).

National Front a Household Name

The NF's name became generally known to the British public the following year 1974 a year that saw a rare occurrence; two General elections. The first of these elections took place in February 1974. The NF put up 54 candidates thus entitling the party to 5-minute TV and radio broadcasts. The media as well as the general public was beginning to take notice of this young, Nationalist party.

Come polling day the National Front had obtained a total of 76,429 votes. No deposits saved but still an impressive effort. Average vote per constituency: 1,423.

In the second General Election that year, held in October, 90 candidates were put up. As in February, the NF were granted 5-minute national TV and radio slots by the broadcasting authorities which would have greatly aided recruitment. Total national vote: 113,844. Average per constituency slightly down 1,265. The best results were in north-east London. Hackney South, Shoreditch produced one of the best – 2,544 votes (9.4%). Clearly the party was on the move and the name, National Front, was known nationwide. More importantly the party had a growing network of branches and groups across Great Britain with considerable support in inner-London and Birmingham.

Long Hot Summer

1976 was the year the NF really became a political phenomenon, though this is not to disregard the sterling efforts of the 1972-74 period. The summer of 1976 was unusually hot for Britain. Many Nationalists will remember this period. Rising racial tensions, violent attacks in the inner-cities, continuing immigration, and a new stronger Race Relations Act to come on to the statute book created endless political opportunities for the Front. This was a peak year for recruitment. Many Nationalist comrades I have known would often possess a membership card stamped 1976 (and often 1974).

Elections. In Leicester, where many Ugandan Asians settled, the National Front polled an astonishing 43,733 votes at local level. In many wards in the city the party narrowly missed out on council seats. Some parliamentary by-elections were fought throughout 1976 and although no deposits were saved, the votes, usually in the thousands were respectable for a minor party. An example being the Thurrock by-election (south Essex) 3,255 (6.64%). All these campaigns further enhanced the party's nationwide profile.

Highest point – 1977/79

The National Front reached new heights during the late 1970s. Unfortunately, its growing size and influence plus mass movement potential meant the Establishment and their red allies were seriously aiming at smashing the party. A whirlwind of hate was created with many different strands; absolutely mendacious media hostility, police harassment and negligence, the violence of the Anti-Nazi League and those of a similar red persuasion. Amazingly the NF, largely composed of ordinary British people including womenfolk and the middle-aged and elderly, weathered the storm. The intense political, legal, and physical bombardment we were subjected to from spring 1977 until the General Election of 1979 saw few defections. Ordinary Britons imbued with the martial spirit of their ancestors battled on!

Reasons for the multi-faceted hate? Electoral advancement. The GLC council elections of May 1977. The NF contested 91 out of the 92 seats. The Front beat the old Liberal party in 33 of these seats and ultimately polled 119,060 votes in the capital. Astonishing at the time and it must be borne in mind that the old GLC elections were a kind of 'mini-General Election' for Greater London. Excellent votes in east London. The London boroughs of Tower Hamlets, Newham, and Hackney saw Percentages of 19%, 15% and 19% respectively. Please note that the NF were not contesting small, ward size political divisions – these were constituency size! Therefore, for example, in the constituency of Bethnal Green & Bow, the 2811 votes (19.2%), demonstrated the growing power of the NF's electoral potential. Added to this an earlier electoral success – the Stechford parliamentary by-election in spring 1977 – naturally created real fear within the political Establishment and of course the far left! Incidentally, the Stechford by-election once again saw the NF beat the Liberals. The NF candidate came third with 2,955 votes (8.2%).

Global Attention

The National Front's final activities for 1977 obtained not just nationwide but worldwide publicity and media attention. The first of these was a march through the immigrant inundated London Borough of Lewisham in August 1977. This protest was principally about the mugging issues in that area. Fierce opposition was expected and did indeed materialise. An unholy collection of every conceivable red group, all manner of anti-British elements and reinforced by multifarious non-whites. Collectively they launched repeated ferocious attacks on the 800 strong NF column as it made its way down the main high street of Lewisham. There were also savage attacks on the Metropolitan Police.

Despite liberal-left propaganda, for forty years afterwards, the Front was not stopped or smashed in Lewisham. The task was completed. They, the NF, had their march and rally!

The publicity went on for weeks. Whatever the merits of the activity, one thing can never be denied; the sheer, raw courage of the brave National Front marchers on the day!

Media attention on the NF was further inflated the following Monday, with a parliamentary by-election in Ladywood, Birmingham. The party had arranged a public meeting in a school hall for its election candidate. A riot ensued, usual suspects, many arrests, many injured. Note; the instigators of these violent public disorders were always the far left! In October '77 the front intended to march through Greater Manchester. The Chief Constable James Anderton applied for a ban on all marches in that area under the 1936 Public Order Act. NF National Activities Organiser, Martin Webster, announced he would march alone through Manchester. He marched through the city carrying a Union flag and wearing a placard stating: "Defend Free Speech from Red Terrorism". He was escorted by 2,000 policemen. Meanwhile the party held a (secret) successful march in Stockport with minimal trouble. Thereby again proving the point that violent disorder at NF public activities was exclusively the responsibility of the far left.

Proof that the National Front was making serious inroads into the political life of Great Britain came through a ridiculous party-political broadcast (Labour) in December 1977. Instead of promoting the policies and 'values' of the Labour Party it was basically a relentless attack on the NF. This included ludicrous camera footage of German soldiers c.1940 marching and comparing them to the patriots of the Front. Clearly the development and progress of the party throughout 1976-77 had really rattled the liberal Establishment especially the Labour Party.

Political Infrastructure

In 1978 the NF was also in the process creating physical infrastructure with purchase of a large, impressive multi-storey building near to central London. It would function as an HQ and social club. It was called Excalibur House. 1978 saw some superb municipal election results obtained (again) in east London in the Boroughs of Hackney and Tower Hamlets. In parts of Hackney the NF often came second (to Labour) in various wards it contested. Voting support of 20% was not unusual.

Remembrance Day Parade

One key regular activity worth mentioning was the National Front Annual Remembrance Day Parade. It took place on the same day, mid-November, as the State's official commemoration of Britain's war dead. The NF parade started (in 1969) not just as a method for us to pay respect to Britain's war dead but also to pay respect to the fallen troops of Rhodesia and South Africa. Then Premier Harold Wilson objected to wreaths laid at the Cenotaph for these two nations because he disapproved of their political regimes. Thus started an old NF tradition of laying wreaths not only for Britain's/Commonwealth's brave dead soldiers but also our long dead racial kinsmen from Rhodesia and South Africa.

The early parades were quite modest in terms of numbers attending. By 1976 the attendance on this activity had swelled to over 6,000 and these figures remained constant for the next few years.

1979 General Election

Britain's General Election May 1979. The National Front put up 301 candidates. Sadly, no deposits were saved, and the vote (per constituency) declined heavily compared to October 1974. In 1979 the NF polled 191,000 (average vote per seat: 635). This was a big, bitter blow but it must be remembered that the British public desperately wanted to remove Callaghan's Labour Government. This was the period of 'The Winter of Discontent' with endless strikes. Another, huge, factor was Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher and her pseudo-nationalism. In particular her comments on national television c.1978 about ... "the British people feeling that they're being swamped by people of different cultures" ... Therefore, there was a mad rush of votes for the Tories that took away a substantial chunk of the NF's potential electoral support. Nonetheless, the Front's intense and professional campaign generated many membership enquiries especially from young people that flooded into Excalibur House.

Similar to recruitment in 1974 and 1976 many NF members had membership cards dated 1979 or 1980 (including myself!). This was probably the last period of real membership growth for the party.

The Early 1980s

Despite a sharp decline in its public political fortunes, the NF saw the development of a more rounded and comprehensive political ideology encompassing not just the standard areas of Race, Immigration and Sovereignty but also whole areas of socioeconomics including a vision of a future British Nationalist economy. Policies included radical proposals regarding the promotion of profit sharing throughout British industry, workers co-ops and an emphasis on 'Back to the Land' making greater efforts to improve and expand British agriculture stressing the opportunity for young Britons to take up a career in farming and with an emphasis on Britain becoming as self-sufficient in food as possible.

Literature

Two NF publications from this period, that even now, are still worth reading (bearing in mind they were printed over forty years ago, the Nationalist literature of their age) and would provide valuable reading for young, contemporary Nationalists are; New Nation magazine and the NF's 1983 General Election Manifesto.

New Nation, a heavyweight Nationalist magazine that despite its erratic appearance (7 issues in 5 years) was probably one of the best British Nationalist magazines ever. Features included Race, Socio-economics, nationalist economics, history, art, ideology. Ignore the fact the first one came out in 1980 some fundamental issues remain timeless. A magazine well worth reading if you can obtain it.

Alongside New Nation, the NF's '83 Manifesto is another quality read. Forget its austere, technical looking appearance. For me the best Nationalist manifesto I have ever read. Plain document, A5 size in black and white print. With the use of concise chapters and bullet points all the way through what was created in its 32 pages was a direct 'punchy' exposition of NF ideology and policies. Sometimes a document of this type, due to its brevity and clarity, is easier to read and digest than something long winded. Again, recommended reading. (A reprint is in the works. Ed.).

Political Reincarnation?

As noted at the beginning of this article the 'officially' constituted NF was dissolved in 1990. It made no difference because numbers by then were in the dozens! The real damage was done with the ultra-destructive schism of 1986. That was THE end of the NF in real political terms.

Alas, the old, original National Front is long gone. Apart from being a political party and a vehicle for the promotion of British Nationalism, it was also an excellent training ground for practical political activity and a superlative educator in political philosophy.

The Front did leave behind a multitude of ideological and tactical political achievements that project into the future. Achievements in terms of political guidance and creating a certain frame of mind, that still possesses intrinsic value today, that still benefits the remainder of the ranks still involved in British Nationalism today;

(1). Spirit of activism, camaraderie.

(2). Political techniques/tactics plus political education.

(3). UK wide network of branches and groups. Some areas defunct due to demographics. Many areas still contain a reservoir of good Nationalists. A 'baton' race whereby ideas and methods are passed on.

(4). Psychological hardness/Physical courage.

Main contributors to the old NF:

Founding Policy Director A. K. Chesterton MC. John Tyndall. Martin Webster. The hundreds of regional/branch organisers. Candidates. Albert Mariner, and of course, the legions of anonymous activists.

We salute you all. The Racial-Nationalist message then passed through the body of the now defunct yet also potentially once great British National Party. That message now resides within the slowly rising British Democrats and Candour magazine.

1977, October 8: The National Front One Man March in Hyde Town Centre

Surrounded by 2,500 uniformed policemen Martin Webster, National Activities Organiser of the NF, pictured left, paraded bearing a Union Flag and placard bearing the inscription "Defend British Free Speech From Red Terrorism".

That same day 800 National Front marchers assembled in Levenshulme and marched successfully into Central Manchester. It is believed another 2,500 uniformed police were involved there.

1977 was a year of vigorous National Front activity. The 'Battle of Lewisham' on 13th August, followed by mayhem surrounding the Ladywood, Birmingham by-election, 18th August. Both actions brought worldwide headline attention to the National Front movement of Britain.

The NF was still on the rise and planned, obviously with the intent of maintaining momentum, a march through Hyde, a town a few miles from Manchester, in October.

The pressure on Martin Webster, the National Front's National Activity Organiser, to maintain the NF publicity juggernaut after Lewisham was intense.

Strategically it made sense. To shift the media attention from London to the Midlands, to the then industrial North West of England was a logical move. All in a two month period!

After initially obtaining a ban on a National Front march in October the Chief Constable of Greater Manchester Police (GMP), James Anderton, apparently met quietly with Martin Webster and agreed to allow a march to take place if the location was kept secret until the last moment.

The Chief Constable of GMP from 1976 to 1991 was a most unusual man and the complete antithesis of any of the woke creeps in or aiming for such a position today*. James Anderton. Later Sir Cyril James Anderton, CBE KStJ QPM DL (1932-2022). He began his career as a beat constable having served in the Army. (Not straight into a fast track rank after 'uni'). Anderton was "God's Copper" to the media. A staunch Christian and never short of an opinion. (Google James Anderton). He was old-fashioned and strong enough to stand up to politicians and would not bend the knee to fashion or trends.

October 8th, 1977, was to be a day of intrigue, secrets, farce, political street theatre and a never to be repeated sight. (At the time there was NO law to prevent one man walking the Queen's Highway. The law would be changed soon after to prevent a repetition). One man walking along a street surrounded by some 2,500 uniformed policemen of almost every rank. That man was Martin Webster (see photo above). He carried a Union flag and a large National Front placard bearing the message "Defend British Free Speech From Red Terrorism".

That day the entire GMP was on standby, reinforcements drafted in from neighbouring forces and helicopters deployed. It was the most sophisticated public order operation in Britain up to that date and the most expensive. (Another two massive policing operations by GMP allowed NF meetings to take place in Hyde and Bolton town halls in January and February 1978).

I believe that there were two agendas at work that day. The National Front's and Anderton's. They happened to coincide. The National Front wanted to show that all the violence at their activities was 'red' organised and generated and that they were not the instigators. Anderton, wanted to prove that he and the police and NOT anyone else, especially anti-cop 'lefties', controlled the streets of Greater Manchester.

The operational experience gained during these actions in 1977 and 1978 would certainly stand the GMP in good stead in July 1981 when bloody, fiery and massively destructive race riots (predicted, of course, by the National Front) blew up in Bristol, Brixton (London), Toxteth (Liverpool) and Moss Side (Manchester). Anderton surely knew that the usual agitators were behind the scenes.

It is interesting, to me certainly, how many different stories there can be behind one photograph of a political activity. The massive TV footage and newspaper coverage in 1977 led to this, then 14-year-old, dedicating his life to racial nationalism.

For better and...the rest...

*The Long March Through the Institutions of Society

"The Long March through the Institutions" was a phrase attributed to the Italian communist Antonio Gramsci (hence 'gramscian march') and then coined as a succinct mission statement by Marxist student activist Rudi Dutschke in the 1960's.

The phrase is used to describe the intellectual takeover of society without need to resort to a military conflict. Instead, the strategy focuses on slowly winning over the chief institutions that determine the direction of a culture and thereby creating a soft revolution from within those institutions. So, the focus was on the universities, unions, media, arts, armed forces. Indeed everything you can think of. Especially the police. Everyday we can see how successful that march has been thus far...

Two Comrades From Different Generations Same Cause: Remembered Forever Ian Stuart & Albert Mariner

SICK SOCIETY

You risked your life for this country when you were young Never questioned orders that they gave
Because the love of the Red, White and Blue was in your heart
And I never thought I'd ever see the day, when I'd hear you say

Now look at a sick society
Look back in time
Now look at our sick society
Who commits the crime

You did your time for king and country overseas
Spent years to keep this nation free
Now you're not allowed to walk the British streets today
Now you're fighting against a foe you cannot see

When you want to march in a democratic fashion
Through the streets of the country that you love
Then you're struck down by a mob of screaming m*****s
Raining in, with bricks from above

We'll remember the things that you have done
Against all odds you would not run
We'll remember the life you gladly gave
Put an English rose upon your grave

Now you have died whilst fighting for your country
Fighting against an enemy that's within
Now I'll make a promise to your memory, Albert Mariner
We'll keep on fighting until we win, yeah, we'll never forget you

(And what happened to the enquiry?)

Above left: Ian Stuart (Donaldson) and right: Albert Mariner. Their deaths were separated by 10 years. Albert in 1983 (see issue #882) and Ian in a car smash in 1993. Forty and thirty years ago.

I knew Ian well and as well as organising gigs in Newcastle in the 1980's for his band Skrewdriver I also produced several videos which I filmed including A Tribute to Violent Storm and Ritorno A Camelot which we made over a glorious weekend in northern Italy in 1991.

Two current Candour subscribers were also at the 1983 National Front local election meeting in Tottenham which was attacked by a huge mob of non-whites agitated by a local Labour Party leaflet and outside of where Albert Mariner was struck by the brick that inflicted the injuries he was to die of a couple of days later.

Ian Stuart wrote and recorded the brilliant protest song, lyrics left, SICK SOCIETY, which describes that event. (Google it. On Youtube).

Two dedicated comrades who understood sacrifice.

THE YANGTSE INCIDENT

(1957 GB)

Released in the US as Battle Hell.

Featuring: Richard Todd, William Hartnell, Donald Houston, Barry Foster, Bernard Cribbins and many other well know British character actors.

Black & White.

1 hour 53 mins approx.

SYNOPSIS (British Film Institute, BFI)

"The story of HMS Amethyst, the frigate which became famous for its exploits on the Yangtse in 1949. While on a legitimate, peaceful mission on the Yangtse River, the Amethyst is fired upon by Chinese (Communist. Ed) forces with great loss of life, and comes to a standstill in a mudbank. For some weeks she remains there, unable to move for fear of destruction while the Navy negotiates with the Chinese Colonel Ping, who wants the British government to claim that the Amethyst illegally opened fire first. Finally, the Amethyst makes a break for freedom, under cover of darkness, hoping to be able to escape the shelling from the Communist forces that line the river for many miles..."

As Candour subscribers know I do not review films as such but do try and add some background to films you may already know or introduce you to new ones or perspectives.

The Yangtze Incident is a Cold War movie about a 1949 incident. It was released in 1957 but was filmed during 1956 which was a terrible year for the Royal Navy and Great Britain.

The Suez Fiasco.

In 1957 the Royal Navy was a very battered outfit badly in need of a confidence and a publicity boost.

Approached with the Yangtze idea by producer Herbert Wilcox the Lords of the Admiralty fell over themselves in offering every support to the film makers. Real ships and sailors. Even HMS Amethyst herself!

The ship was due to be broken up and was without engines but her sister, Black Swan class frigate HMS Magpie, stood in for shots of the ship moving and firing her guns.

The actors and serving sailors mix very well. Many of the actors were WWII veterans. Richard Todd served with the Paras and was dropped at Pegasus Bridge, near Caen, after D-Day and was involved in the ferocious battles that followed.

A Difficult Truth The Way I See It

Many British films made during and post WWII in the late 1940's and through the 1950's were, let's be brutally honest, very much about justifying the disastrous and Empire self-destructing role that Great Britain played in the Second Brothers War.

That the immense and otherwise inexplicable blood sacrifice, and rationing, were all worth it. Of ALL the countries involved Britain was the last to stop rationing food. IN 1954!

Only in the 1970's would the 'Holocaust' ® be brought into play to reinforce, or possibly to totally replace, the fraying 'good war' scenario.

Post 1945, and pre-the mass take off of television, cinema was still massive in Great Britain. Cinema attendance in 1946 reached an amazing 1.64 billion admissions. Yes. Billion.

By the 1950's cinema was in decline but still hugely popular and a two or three times a week habit for many Britons. A place of joined experience and dry and warm in austerity Britain.

The Dambusters (1955), Ice Cold in Alex (1958), The Colditz Story (1955), The Wooden Horse (1950), Sea of Sand (1958), The Cruel Sea (1953) to give just a few examples were made as entertainment, of course, but also to reinforce the reason for the endless British sacrifice in WWII. To bolster the self confidence and perhaps later self delusion of the men who had surrendered without a fight or were wounded and found themselves in a POW camp. No shame on them. (Think Singapore). Men respond very differently to actual conflict. Also there can be no comparing of the British POW circumstances under the Germans or Italians to those of the totally alien Japanese or their Korean sidekicks.

They were, for the most, very inspiring movies. Some moving and thoughtful. Stirring. Which is why they mostly succeeded and keep on working. That many of them were made by non-Britons with their own agenda is a story for another time. They were certainly very cleverly designed.

I learned long ago to take them for what they are. They shaped how the men who served, and others, came to see and remember their service and the 'reasons' for their sacrifice.

To view the full film of The Yangtze Incident online you could try ok.ru/video/1819397458672 or just generally search. Well worth finding. Some nice humour too...

'Able Cat' Simon RN (The only feline holder of a Dickin Medal) HMS Amethyst 1949

"After nearly six weeks on the Yangtze conditions in Amethyst were continuing to deteriorate. Flies, mosquitoes and cockroaches were a problem, and the after part of the ship was uninhabitable because of rats. Disinfectant had run out and it was only by 'scrupulous cleanliness' that disease could be kept in check.

'Life on board generally was work', said Ernest Munson, an ordinary seaman. 'We used to make our own enjoyment, games of uckers (similar to ludo), crib. It was hot, temperatures up in the hundreds, and when the ship was shut down most of the chaps stayed on the upper deck...'

'...Sometimes we slept below decks because of the weather', said Munson. 'A rat would run past my camp bed every night on his usual run. The other chaps used to try to hit it with boots and things. I was tucked away in my camp bed trying to dodge the boots and the rat. We did catch some of the rats in different ways but we were getting fed up with them. I can remember this chap waking up one morning and finding a rat swinging about six inches from his face. Someone had put up a fuse-wire snare on the pipes above.'

The best rat catcher was a black and white cat named Simon. It is thought that a worker at the naval dockyard on Stonecutters Island, Hong Kong, gave Simon as a kitten to Amethyst's former captain, Lieutenant Commander Ian Griffiths, who liked cats and was aware that rats were always trying to get at the food supplies. It was not long before Simon took up quarters in the captain's cabin, where he sometimes brought his trophies. Griffiths once found a dead rat on his bunk. The captain only had to whistle and Simon would accompany him on his rounds. But one day the cat disappeared while the ship was berthed in Honk Kong. A former member of Amethyst's crew, 17 year old George Hickinbottom, apparently found Simon wandering in the dockyard and returned him to the ship. When Griffiths was given a new command, the cat remained on board. Griffith's successor, Lieutenant Commander Skinner, also liked cats. Simon was asleep in the captain's cabin when Amethyst was attacked on 20 April.

Lieutenant Hett explained:

'Simon was hit in the captain's cabin. He suffered shock and blast and goodness knows what. He just went to earth. We don't know quite where he went and, of course, at this stage we were very much more concerned with saving the ship than looking after animals (a dog called Peggy was also on board).

About a week afterwards Simon crept out from wherever he was and then he went around with the ship's company. Simon had a scar on his ear and his forehead and his whiskers were a bit singed because a shell had bust in the cabin. But he settled down and killed rats. I had my foot bitten by a rat when I was in my bunk one night. The rats came through the ventilation trunking.'

The badly injured Simon had been found by Petty Officer George Griffiths and was treated by Fearnley the RAF doctor. He was not expected to survive but he made a good recovery. Simon resumed his duties, catching rats everywhere - the stokers' mess deck, the petty officers' pantry and 'spud locker', the portside galley, the bridge, the forward mess deck, the after mess deck, and the chief petty officer's mess. His greatest success was a rat nicknamed 'Mao Tse-tung', a particularly vicious creature that kept eluding the crew's traps. Simon cornered the rat and killed it quickly, delighting the sailors and earning promotion to Able Seacat."

Yangtze Showdown by Brian Izzard. (See below)

Following the ship's escape from the Yangtze, Simon became an instant celebrity, lauded in British and world news, and was presented with the 'Animal Victoria Cross', the Dickin Medal. At every port HMS Amethyst stopped at on its route home, Simon was presented with honours, and a special welcome was made for him at Plymouth in November when the ship returned to her home base.

Simon was, however, like all animals entering the UK, subject to quarantine regulations, and was immediately sent to an animal centre in Surrey.

Whilst in quarantine, Simon contracted a virus and, despite the attentions of medical staff and thousands of well-wishers, died on 28 November 1949 from a complication of the viral infection brought on by his war wounds. Hundreds, including many of the crew of HMS Amethyst, attended his funeral at the PDSA Ilford Animal Cemetery in east London.

Colin, congratulations on another fine issue of Candour. What with rising print and postal charges I don't know how you manage to produce a hard copy magazine.

I used to print several copies of my blogs for some of my old comrades who were not online. The cost was prohibitive and I thought I would have to stop doing it, but one by one they have all passed away.

I enjoyed Steven Smith's article on 'Civic Nationalism and Media Shills', but I take issue with him on the need for immigration. It's not a question of education or motivation, it's a simple matter of the availability of labour. With a birth rate below replacement level we are losing people at an unsustainable rate. And without immigration we will not be able to maintain our services. Of course, it's up to us where we get our immigrants from; we can choose our fellow Europeans or Africans and Asians. The present political establishment clearly favours non-Europeans, but they will not be in power forever.

I think that it's unrealistic to say that we do not need immigration.

The security situation in South Africa continues to deteriorate and the white South Africans would be excellent immigrants to the UK. They probably would not want to come here while we have such a rotten government but if we managed to get rid of the present regime, they would come. Most of them are of Dutch, British or French stock, they speak English, they are Christians, and they are hard working conservative people.

2 May in response to Candour Blog of 1 May

I agree with your refusal to swear allegiance to Charles Windsor. I had a soft spot for the old Queen but I am no fan of her son. I wrote an article for my blog on the monarchy but I had second thoughts about it because most of my readers are royalists. I was surprised that the editor of Candour made such a frank statement. I applaud your bravery.

If it's TRUTH you want
it's CANDOUR you need!

Editor,

Owning a 1944 copy of the book, Goodbye Mr. Chips, I was interested to read the article by Tarka (Candour #883).

I would like to introduce readers to a book I read as a child, The Little Grey Men by 'BB', winner of the Carnegie Medal. It is a book for the young and for the young at heart, for I confess, although now in my 60's I re-read it a few years ago and enjoyed it almost as much as I did as a child.

To quote from the Introduction, "This is a story about the last gnomes in Britain. They are honest-to-goodness gnomes, none of your baby, fairy book tinsel stuff, and they live by hunting and fishing, like the animals and birds, which is only proper and right." The last of an ancient dying race!!!

The gnomes rejoice in the names of Cloudberry - the blacksheep of the family (can one use such terms now?!) who gets his comeuppance in the sequel, Down The Bright Stream - Sneezewort, Baldmoney and Dodder.

The opening lines set the tone for the book, "It was one of those days at the tail end of the winter when spring, in some subtle way, announced its presence. The hedges were still purple and bristly, the fields bleached and bitten, full of quarrelling starling flocks; but there was no doubt about it, the winter was virtually over and done with for another seven months."

On a totally different subject, more Nationalists must stop being on the defensive, it looks like we have something to be ashamed of. We must take the fight to the enemies of Britain. We are not intrinsically bad people because we don't want to see our ancestral homeland invaded (our alien Home Secretary's word!) and our way of life altered irrevocably, and most of the indigenous British agree with us. The 'left', having lost the political argument resort to name calling, which we shouldn't be afraid of. I remember being on a march in the halcyon days of the NF in the 70's and the SWP were chanting, "The National Front is a racist front, smash the National Front". We replied with, "The National Front is a racist front, JOIN the National Front!"

Regards,

Derek Summers

Editor: Derek Summers is absolutely correct about racial Nationalists being proud of their past and NOT being on the defensive. The 'civic' nationalists or indeed anyone else on the 'fringes' who attack racial nationalists because of their previous involvement in the old National Front, former British National Party, British Movement or indeed any of the organisations that have fought for race and nation since 1967 should be suspect. The lightweights and 'just seen the light's' who complain about cancel culture and are ever ready to forment trouble and form new groups or parties and demand a 'clean start' without the 'baggage of the past'. They really need to be examined very carefully...

What do you think readers?

Dear Editor:

Don't worry about the increased postal rates leading to you having to raise the Candour subscription.

We, your Candour readers will remain faithful.

Here in America the postal rates are also going up again in July for domestic & overseas.

Despite all this I do try to continue to use snail mail whenever possible.

#883 - an excellent edition - Rosine would be so proud of the way you have maintained her legacy.

Keep up the good work.

The root to a free society

CLIMATE Eco-Socialism is a new book out by Jeremy Nieboer and is available from the Bruges Group at www.brugesgroup.com or Amazon.

It is the third and final book in a trilogy. The other books are 'All Is Well and Will Be Well' and 'CO2 Nature's Gift'. Those books deal with the natural causation of climate change and the benefits of CO2. This new book deals with the Big Lie that is perpetrated on the masses of man-made climate change.

There is a saturation point for CO2 capacity to absorb thermal radiation after which the addition of more CO2 has no effect on warming. Satellite observations over 43 years show that fluctuations of temperature are caused by natural phenomena.

As Hayek F spoke in 1944 in the 'Road to Serfdom' page 164: "Public criticism or even expressions of doubt must be suppressed. The whole apparatus for spreading knowledge, the schools and the press, wireless and cinema, will be used to exclusively to spread those views which... strengthen the belief... and all information that might cause doubt of hesitation will be withheld".

Global warming caused by CO2 has become an inviolate belief, a religion. The creed is sacrosanct and utterly exempt from criticism.

The root of a free society is the exchange of knowledge and ideas. It is this that enabled the Industrial Revolution to take place in a free market economy. It is this that has led to all the rapid progress since. Eco-Socialism wants to end all this and subject us to global serfdom via global climate change rules.

The creation of a global pandemic treaty would be yet another plank in this strategy whereby the sovereignty of parliament is bypassed. Then it matters not who you vote for. This is the situation we are confronted with if things do not change.

Milton Ellis,
Newtown.

Alarming Support

The extraordinarily enthusiastic support for the visit by President Zelensky last Wednesday is an alarming demonstration of the Establishment's backing for the conflict in Ukraine, a conflict that is in reality a war of Eastward NATO expansion in which young Ukrainians are the canon fodder. The Prime Minister has even gone so far as to say 'nothing is off the table' for Ukraine. I find this worrying, will Special Forces be inserted, are they already in Ukraine?

Imminent NATO expansion threatens even more burdens on member states of which we are, alas, a leading one.

With the anniversary of the Russian invasion upon us and no resolution of the conflict in sight, the drums of war grow louder. I believe further involvement is not in Britain's interests. Instead, we should reduce, or better, eliminate our commitment to a conflict in which no vital interests of ours are at stake. Our entanglement in Ukraine is becoming ever more costly and we have plenty on the Home Front on which to spend our money.

Time to pull out from NATO? I think so! It bestows huge and increasingly dangerous burdens on us and, with the old Soviet Union a distant memory, few discernible benefits,

Yours truly,

A Romilly

Leaders have let us down

Successive governments have allowed our once great nation to go to rack and ruin.

The ticking of boxes when choosing people for the job has led to a massive decline in public service by the police. The TV airs lots of traffic officers hounding drivers but never one about ordinary police work.

We have far too many MPs all drawing expenses and yet when Parliament sits without it being a special occasion, like the Budget, the place is devoid of MPs and those that speak are talking to an empty chamber.

Stabbings and killings are a daily event to the point that they are no longer worthy of care by most people.

Illegal immigrants are now housed and fed instead of being deported and sadly some turn out to be criminals.

We taxpayers even have to fund their legal aid to enable them to avoid them being deported.

The NHS is starved of funds and yet they have layers of highly paid managers managing managers.

Patients are left waiting for beds and ambulances are tied up waiting to unload patients before they can answer other emergencies.

I could go on and on about the leaders' failings but haven't either the time or inclination to do so.

Peter Hyde, sent via email.

Here I am showing you just three letters written by Candour subscribers and published in 2023 in their local newspapers.

Milton Ellis cleverly included the website address of the publishers of the CLIMATE books (see back page of this issue) in his letter. Nice one!

Do not expect everything you send to be printed. Patience and perseverance are the key.

Beware those who think basic activity such as this is below them.

Too much computer 'activity' and reliance on technology is only producing a race of Gollum's who believe they are Hobbits.

Breaking News: US Supreme Court Rules Against Colleges in Affirmative Action Case

Although this case goes primarily against anti-White hatred in American Universities ...

... it is THE bellweather of the de-construction of the official, government-sponsored White Genocide – Great Replacement strategy in USofA. At least the beginning of the end.

This decision against institutionalized Anti-White Hatred has no precedent. It's a Donald Trump thing – all his Supreme Court justice picks voted for it.

Now we get to see if The Enemy will resort to mass violence to compensate for their judicial defeat.

Last year, Abortion. Today, "Affirmative Action." Tomorrow – Close the Open Borders? At least we can dream...

CLIMATE:
ECO=SOCIALISM
By Jeremy Nieboer

Is the THIRD and final book in the CLIMATE series written by Jeremy Nieboer and published by and available from:

www.brugesgroup.com

ISBN:
9781739315207
Softback.

The covers of books I & II in the CLIMATE series trilogy by Jeremy Nieboer are shown below.

For your information:

CLIMATE:

ALL IS WELL, ALL WILL BE WELL

ISBN: 9781838065850

Softback.

78 pages. £14.99

CLIMATE:
CO2 NATURE'S GIFT

ISBN: 9781838065867

Soft cover.

82 pages. £14.99

The first book in this series: All is Well, All will be Well explained how the Sun's cycles, Earth's orbits and ocean shifts govern temperature.

The second CO2 Nature's Gift showed that CO2 provides all our oxygen and food but is at its lowest level for over 99% of the past 500 million years. If CO2 doubled crop yields rise by over 50% - with no noticeable effect on warming.

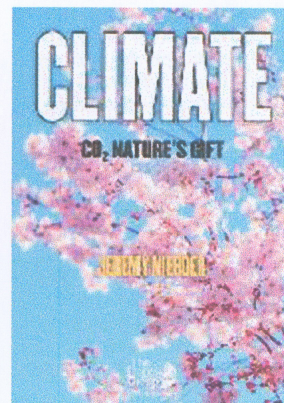

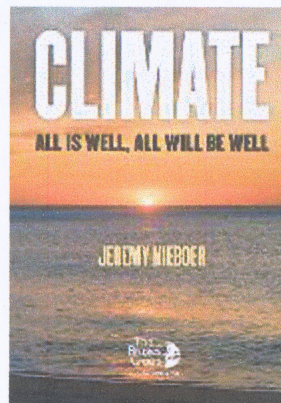

At pre industrial levels CO2 has already absorbed all available radiated heat. Adding more of the gas has no noticeable effect. Even if doubled it would result in warming of only 0.80C. This is a basic principle of radiation spectroscopy. It has been known for over 50 years to those responsible for disseminating the shocking deception of global warming dogma.

Intent must be inferred from the effects. Ending fossil fuel combustion, which eco-socialism requires, will bring about the collapse of the open market economies of countries that enforce it. Our prosperity is receding as ever more burdens of compliance become insupportable. This final CLIMATE volume raises four questions forced upon us by the insanity of Net Zero.

How have the liberal democracies of the World allowed the collapse of industrialised civilisation to become even a possibility? How is it that the dismal and fallacious conception of a fearful and imperilled humanity has been allowed to paralyse reason? How has a colossal deception come to be dictated by an unaccountable bureaucracy and basic principles of physics and spectroscopy distorted and suppressed?

Which States will benefit from such a disaster? Are they not China and Russia whose scientists and governments know that there is no man made CO2 climate crisis?

Will our way of life be preserved if we allow these things or do not even seek answers?

Please do NOT try and order the above three titles from Candour or The AK Chesterton Trust. We do NOT stock these books.

Go direct to www.brugesgroup.com

Thank you to Milton Ellis for pointing us in the direction of the series. (See also Letters page 14).

Subscribers Only

Reality = Subscription Increase

I have now raised the subscription rates for Candour for the first time since 2017.

Checking through the file since I last raised subscriptions I see that there have been at least SIX hikes in POSTAL RATES by the Royal Mail. (Possibly SEVEN. Too depressing to delve into the recent history further! In 1971, the year of decimalisation, 1st Class 3p, 2nd 2.5p which puts our subscription raises into perspective).

Over the past couple of years the subscription numbers have grown steadily, against all publishing trends, with some folk finding us for the first time and others, some very surprised we are still going, coming back to Candour.

The writing of Steve Smith, Tarka, HM and others and the sales skills of Derek Beackon, financial and moral support of our friends (special shout out to the folk in the USA!) have all played a great part.

More writers and articles are always needed! You choose your subject, area of interest, speciality. Not everything submitted is printed of course but nothing ventured... and we can always work on articles or ideas together. I never stop learning. What do you know about music, favourite books, films, animals, your local history (a favourite of mine), people, political memories, why do you subscribe to Candour? Press pen to paper folks. It can be so liberating...

Above: Three "Wild Geese". Still fighting after many years in the 'cause'. Where are the missing generations of angry young racial nationalist patriots we once were? (Still are!) Photo taken near Southend 3rd May. Steve Smith, Derek Beackon, Colin Todd.

Out of This World Dry Wit

In 1961 Alan Shepard became the first American in space. When reporters asked him what he was thinking as he sat atop his rocket, waiting for lift-off, he replied: "The fact that every part of this ship was built by the lowest bidder."

Local Elections 4th May 2023

Old news by the time you receive this I know...

The British Democratic Party were the only racial nationalist party involved in the recent UK local council elections. These elections took place throughout England but not in every area.

Strategically the Brit Dems did not put out a national call for candidates but stood just five in interesting areas and for varying reasons.

The candidates and results were:

Chris Bateman, Laindon Park Ward, Basildon, 89 votes (4.2%).

Dr. Jim Lewthwaite, Wyke Ward, Bradford, 140 votes (5.1%).

David Haslett, Saffron Ward, Leicester, 34 votes (1.9%)

Steve Smith, Kursaal Ward, Southend, 42 votes (2.6%)

Julian Leppert, Waltham Abbey Patternoster Ward, Epping-Forest, 187 votes (25.2%)

Bravo to the candidates and to those who campaigned to support them and hit the streets to leaflet and canvas.

Pay no heed to the naysayers and spreaders of doom. That is the voice of the enemy whispering in your ear.

Special Note: The quality of the Brit Dems election leaflets and general campaigning material is extremely high. I believe the credit for that should go to Mr. Mike Jones.

DONATIONS

Candour* always needs financial support over and above subscriptions and sales.

In the UK please make all cheques or Postal Orders payable to Colin Todd.

Payment can be made to us from around the world using PayPal at our Online Store on our website at:

www.candour.org.uk

(Note: the donate button works in multiples of £10.00). If sending cash in the UK do so using Recorded Delivery (which is now the same, apparently, as Registered Post).

OVERSEAS: If sending cash from Overseas (£'s Sterling, Euros or US $'s only) wrap in silver kitchen foil and send in a well sealed envelope. If you have a problem sending cash or using PayPal contact Colin Todd at akctrust@yahoo.co.uk and we can arrange bank transfers.

Please send all postal correspondence to:

Candour Research Department

A big thank you to the two generous Candour subscribers who helped out with information and material after the appeal in our EXTRA! #883 asking about The Voice of St. George newspaper of a group called England First run by a Welshman, Gareth 'Spike' Hurley, and funded by the state operative (how many states?) Italian Roberto Fiore who was at the same time backing Nick Griffin's campaign to take over and destroy the BNP 1999. Ditto 1986 the National Front.

This from a subscriber in Staffs. "I believe there were 33 issues, 32 in the run plus a Birmingham Special, which I have located between issues 2 and 3 (though I may be wrong)... Issue 9 (with FOREVER in big red letters on cover) is misnumbered as issue 8".

Which was useful as BD in London sent me two issues of the The Voice of St. George one of which was the misnumbered issue 8. The other being 24.

I thank both loyal Candour subscribers mentioned above for their help and renew my appeal for back issues of this publication. You can help by searching for copies online and on ebay.

Honour Roll for our next book
East London Rights for Whites 1990-94
By Steve Smith

To join in and assist with our work in researching, preparing, publishing and launching Steve Smith's East London Rights for Whites 1990-94 book in 2023 you can send £40.00 and join the Honour Roll.

The book will appear in the year that marks the 30th Anniversary of Derek Beackon's world headline making election in the London East End's Isle of Dogs as the BNP's first ever Councillor in 1993.

The Honour Roll will appear in the book before the Introduction. In addition to your name being featured you will also be sent one of the first paperback copies from the printers signed by both author Steve Smith and by Derek Beackon.

The book will include new information, features and photographs not seen in the 4 part Candour series.

Join the Honour Roll. Twelve Candour subscribers and supporters have done so already (at the time this is printed). You can send your contribution of £40.00 (or more or in instalments) to us via PayPal at our website:
